Introduction

There is a growing body of ready-made CLB-referenced assessment tasks and tools for PBLA. A large collection of 250 assessment tasks is currently in development by Ottawa Catholic District School Board, and will be available in May 2018, at realworldtasks.ca. We hope they will be a valuable resource for you.

Where communicative competence is the goal, a simple feedback form can focus on essential criteria needed to successfully perform a task in the real world, with a simple rating scale. If the feedback form provides insufficient direction, instructors can also consult the CLB descriptors in the INSTRUCTOR REFERENCE SHEETS to determine the CLB level the communication best fits within.

We hope that as PBLA implementation grows, more suitable tools will be developed. In the meantime, we compiled this package to provide easy-to-use sample tools to facilitate assessment right away. Because they were selected with user-friendliness in mind, they may not contain the level of detail that other assessment tools contain. If you prefer more complex tools, you can select from the variety of tools listed on final page of this package, or create your own.

Tips for Assessing Speaking

- Use common speaking tasks on topics that you already address in class.
- Ensure learners have had sufficient instruction and practice with similar speaking tasks, using similar criteria to self or peer assess
- Use a pre-created feedback form, or alternatively, write the task and task criteria on the board and have learners copy it onto a blank assessment feedback form (in this package).
- Have learners use the form to self/peer assess. Then assess the writing of select learners, and sign bottom of feedback form (to distinguish it from peer or self-assessed).
- For guidance in determining if a task is level appropriate, or on assessing the CLB level of task performance, see the CLB descriptors on pages 18-19 of this package.

Ways to Facilitate Task Performance

- Individuals or small groups present to class: observing peers engage in peer feedback; instructor observes and evaluates learners as they perform/present
- Small groups or pairs do the task simultaneously: instructor circulates and evaluates some learners as they perform
- Learners perform task at "task stations": observing peers do peer feedback; instructor circulates and evaluates learners as they perform at a task station
- Learners get interviewed by the instructor

Speaking Assessment Task Types

Tips for Assessing Writing

- Select common writing tasks on topics you already address in class
- Ensure learners have had sufficient instruction and practice with similar writing tasks
- Have an editing checklist that learners become familiar with, with key items on it. Some of the items can be used as criteria for the assessment task
- Have similar writing tasks as learning and practice tasks, using similar criteria; then have learners repeat the writing task in a slightly different context. Learners can assess themselves or each other using the criteria, then produce a more polished copy.
- Use a pre-created feedback form, or alternatively, write the task and task criteria on the board and have learners copy it onto a blank assessment feedback form (in this package).
- Assess select learners, then sign bottom of feedback form (to distinguish it from peer or self-assessed).
- For guidance in determining if a task is level appropriate, or on assessing the CLB level of task performance, see the CLB descriptors on pages 29-30 of this package.

Strengths and Limitations section of the Profile of Ability

Use this page to help determine the CLB level a learner is performing at.

Remember: Use your assessment task criteria first. They will tell you if the learner can carry out a task in the real world. If the learner is successful, you can use this page to help you determine a CLB level.

^{*} Note: The ability to reproduce or reduce information is dependent on the writer's ability to comprehend. Therefore, it is assumed that the content to be reproduced or reduced has a degree of moderate complexity that does not exceed the writer's Reading Benchmark (in the case of print or online content) or Listening Benchmark (in the case of oral discourse).

Tips for Assessing the Receptive Skills (Reading & Listening)

- Select common reading or listening texts on topics you already address in class; For guidance determining if a text is level appropriate, see the CLB descriptors listed in the Features of Communication, on pages 33 (listening) and 35 (reading) of this package.
- Determine what learners will do to demonstrate they understand the text.
 Although having learners answer comprehension questions (task type 7, below) is common, there are many other options (see below).

- Determine what constitutes success on the task (e.g., 70% correct).
- Ensure learners have had sufficient instruction and practice with the vocabulary and subject matter of the text and with the task type.
- After the task is completed, take it up as a class. If you are using task type 7 below (comprehension questions), you can provide an answer sheet, or write the answers on the board, and have learners mark their own or a peer's task. Then circulate to review task sheets (or all or just some learners), sign the bottom of it (to indicate your review) and have learners file in their portfolios.

Assessment Task Types

Assessing reading and listening can be done with a variety of task types, such as:

- 1. Retell something heard or read
- 2. Complete a chart to organize information based on what is heard or read
- 3. Produce a poster in response to a reading or listening text
- 4. Produce a reflective response/learning log based on a reading or listening text
- 5. Perform an action to demonstrate comprehension of a reading or listening text
- 6. Make a decision or judgement based on a listening or reading text
- 7. Read or listen to a text, then answer comprehension questions about it. Questions at the CLB 5-8 range usually require learners to do some of the following:
 - Identify main idea, gist or overall purpose of the text
 - Identify the situation or context
 - Identify key factual details
 - Identify some key implied meaning (if relevant)
 - Identify basic parts and purpose of a conversation, monologue or text
 - Identify meaning of key words, expressions and idioms from the context
 - Identify mood and attitude or writer or speaker
 - Identifies organization of a text and links between ideas
 - Express own thoughts or opinions about the text

Portfolio Review (for peer or self review)

Instructor note: It is a good idea to engage learners regularly in peer or self review of their portfolio. This can benefit learners, and prepare them for the instructor's portfolio review. A sample form to facilitate peer or self-review is below.

	Are the tabs inserted in the correct place? (About me, Listening, Speaking, Reading, Writing)
	Are your classroom notes inserted in the correct place (in the My Notes section)
	Are your assessment tasks inserted in the correct place (in the Portfolio section)
